

Truist Foundation Awards NCIA $2.8 Million Grant

90-Second Video Transcript

Herb Hoelter: We at NCIA are honored and humbled by this incredible gift of $2.8 million from the Truist Foundation to expand our vocational training program over the next two years. NCIA's vocational training centers offer vocational training in five high-growth industries, workforce development and case management services, as well as job placement for returning citizens, homeless veterans and economically disadvantaged individuals. This grant will allow us to serve more than 15,000 individuals annually, having a tremendous impact on those seeking the opportunity for a second chance and financial independence affecting thousands of families.

Lynette Bell: The Truist Foundation is proud to partner with NCIA as they expand their vocational centers and cities across this country to help those who just need a helping hand. We believe in inspiring and building better lives and communities and the mission of NCIA closely aligns with our principles. It is my pleasure today to support NCIA as they create these vocational training centers to build jobs, economic security and the skill sets for those who need it the most.
